Eighty-seven out of every 100 vacationers will use their cars, he said, and the average trip will cover 980 miles. He predicted highway travel will leave a total of 3,455,000,000 miles in Georgia, consume about 230,200,000 gallons of gasoline and pay $18,416,000 in state and federal gasoline taxes during the summer season.

"Summer does far more than any other season to prove America lives on wheels," he said. "Summer taxes and travel may leave Mr. and Mrs. Car Owner pretty well knocked out by Labor Day, but the season's activities will mean an estimated $150,000,000 to businessmen in the state."

Adding a somber note, he decried public apathy toward traffic deaths, which he said appear to be mounting to new highs along with taxes.

"Those who look at it only on the Fourth and stayed alive on the fifth of July had better not push their luck too far," he warned. "Think once, think twice — and then think again before you start to pass that 'slow poke' ahead of you. Remember, it might be you in that next grinding crash."

Fair To Railroads?

THE GEORGIA STATE Public Service Commission has given permission for the Central of Georgia to discontinue that passenger train between Savannah and Augusta known as the Little Nancy Hanks. This permission was granted following a public hearing at which it was shown that the railroad had operated for the past year at a loss of $110,000.

The least that can be said of the permission granted by the commission is that the order is fair. The people of any community are not morally entitled to any service which they do not actually need, and the test of that need is the income from the service.

The time when railroads went on their knees to plead for a place to serve, and then the permission was sometimes granted reluctantly. Gradually traffic conditions have changed to the point that competition has undermined the railroads. Labor conditions—regulations of the unions, and such other forces as must be recognized—have tended to undermine the public carriers of freight and passengers.

Trucks carry packages into the heart of a community on short notice and make speedy delivery by the aid of one or two unskilled laborers. A one-man vehicle transports passengers from one place to another and drops the passengers right into the heart of the destination.

With this competition there is no need for support of railroad service. It is entirely fair to discontinue any public service which the public does not support with cash patronage.

Railroads cannot afford to run for courtesy and appearance—it takes cash to meet the weekly payroll.

Should Be Spewed?
THERE USED TO BE occasionally quoted from the preacher's desk at the old log school house of our boyhood community, the declaration, "Because thou art neither hot nor cold, I will spew thee out of my mouth."

Old Brother Reynolds never attempted to bring it into political significance, but as days have dragged along we have sort of reached a conclusion that the quotation had a general bearing on steadfastness to ideals—a loyalty to those with whom we share responsibility—and the fruits of our conduct in matters of public concern. It may not be a Bible quotation, but it is true as Scripture that, "United we stand, divided we fall."

We drew a recent picture from memory of the selfish, long-haired "heretic" male cow which had deserted the herd in the woods, and exercised his right to travel alone. He was a perfect picture of independence—no responsibility for the safety of others of his tribe in case of trouble—but he was a pitiable spectacle if and when the devouring beasts came his way.

It is no crime for a man in the South to align himself with the Republican party, and follow after those doctrines of policy which that party upholds—but it is worse than a fallacy for a man to vote with the Republican party and still call himself a Democrat. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

And worse than fallacious would it be to charge a Democratic administration with all the unwise, or unfortunate conditions which occur during its own regime—and solemnly add to the list of crimes those unwise incidents of a succeeding administration. For instance, if Woodrow Wilson could be blamed for the conduct of his regime, then why wasn't Hoover equally responsible for the good—and bad—of his term in office? Don't answer this if your judgment is politically biased?

In all legitimate arbitration, winner and loser are equally bound. In a contest with crooks, the secret motto is "Heads, I win; tails, you lose." It is safe to watch this sort of philosophy in all matters of importance—political and social.

Profit Is Necessary

A SURVEY HAS been made of the financial experience of a large number of retail stores during 1951. For the year sales were slightly up, but profit was down to the lowest point since 1939. This was largely the result of higher operating expenses and higher taxes. It was a rare store indeed that had more profit in 1951 than in 1950.

Some consumers may think this is all to the good—we naturally want to buy commodities for as little as possible. And, in the free enterprise system, competition always holds prices down and keeps profits to moderate levels. Natural economic law takes care of that. However, we have been living in an abnormal period in which merchants, like other businessmen, have often found it difficult or impossible to keep up with rising costs. On top of that, some of the government control policies have been designed to grant unfair to retailers, and have represented an obvious effort to force the retailer to absorb costs over which he has no control. In the long run, this cannot avoid hurt to the customer and worker no less than the owners and managers of enterprise. Dangerously low profits force retrenchment. They are destructive to initiative. They produce economic lethargy.

Retailers, faced with the existing cost and profit trends, are going to limit in cutting costs and squeezing out all economic expenditures. But this can only produce limited results—retailing has long been an extremely efficient industry, and there isn't much room for shaving expenses. Unavoidable costs must be reflected in prices we pay—there's no other solution. Fair profits will help keep America strong and vigorous.

New World War POW Payment Begin Aug. 1

Atlanta, June 16.—A second payment to American World War II prisoners for treatment received in enemy prison camps is to commence on August 1, William K. Barrett, director of the State Department of Veterans Service, announced today. Barrett learned from the War Claims Commission that this was the date set for the initial payment to start.

About 152,000 former POWs and dependents of dead POWs are eligible for payment. Payments will be $150 for each day the POWs were forced to work or were treated improperly by the enemy. The commission finished a payment last month of $1 for each day POWs didn't get enough to eat.

The average second payment for men who were POWs in Europe is expected to be $400.

In order to be paid, those eligible will have to file claim form now being prepared by the commission. Claims forms will be mailed to each POW who received first payment. This department will also have sufficient supply on hand for distribution to other eligibles.

Barrett invited interested persons to come by the nearest branch office of the State Department of Veterans Service for further information. The nearest branch office is located at Statesboro. Manager of the office is Philip L. Falligant.

Conservation News In Bulloch County

(By E. T. MULLIS, Soil Conservation Service.)

Johan Marie Zequers, of Roermond, the Netherlands, and Reini Pictet, Hendrik Miedena, of Broxlet, the Netherlands, were in Bulloch county last week studying the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District set-up and its approach to the problem of soil and water conservation. The Soil Conservation Service assisting the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District was given the responsibility of showing these men from a foreign country how we in America accomplish an objective so important as the preservation of our soil and water resources through our regular domestic processes.

Even in such a model European democracy as Holland or the Netherlands the farmers themselves do not govern the work of a governmental agency as do the supervisors of our soil conservation districts. They asked the question as to whether this method wasn't time consuming, and we had to admit that it was, but that it was a very well spent. All our democratic processes are time-consuming and slow, but sure and sound. Our method of approach to soil and water conservation through local conservation districts based upon local capability as determined by a complete soil survey is the foundation. Our ultimate objective is using every acre on all farms for what it is best suited, and treating each acre according to its needs for maximum returns. Our Dutch friends found this very commendable, and after having planned a farm in the Netherlands with the farmer on these very same principles, were completely sold on the farm soil and water conservation plan as the basis on which to develop that farm to the fullest.

These agricultural leaders of Europe's below-sea-level lands were impressed as they went over Bulloch county by the farmer's interest in conserving his soil and the progress we are making in area of pasture development. They were not impressed by the quality of the average pasture, but this was to be expected from men who live in the most densely populated area in the world—900 people per square mile. Their farmsteads pay careful attention to the organic and humus content of the soil, and fertilize with up to 2,000 pounds nitrate of soda per acre—their water table being governed by an irrigation system of canals.

In Bulloch county these men from a mother country visited our "farms of Paul Groover, where they saw fresh watermelons and took pictures of snakes and coons; C. M. Graham, W. A. Groover, observed Driggers brothers building pond with bulldozers on joint enterprise of Paul L. Groover, and Marvin Rowe, near Brooklet. over pasture farm of A. P. Murphy, where they saw fine Aberdeen-Angus herd of beef cattle, and inspected completed pond of J. V. Hardy. Half of their last day in Bulloch county was spent on the farms and in the homes of Fred and Henry Blitch, of West Side, where they were delightfully entertained and educated in American agriculture. Their program was rounded out by a visit with the other agricultural agencies in the county seat at Statesboro, notably the county agent and the assistant, PMA and FHA.

Farmer's Question Corner
PREPARED BY American Foundation
For Animal Health

WHAT ABOUT ANTHRAX?
Q: Is anthrax more dangerous to some farm animals than to others?
A: Anthrax is a serious hazard to all livestock. However, cattle are its most frequent victims.

Q: How does this disease act?
A: It strikes quickly, kills quickly. In fact, farmers frequently think animals have been struck by lightning, when actually anthrax caused the deaths. Before death it may cause staggering, spasms and stupor.

Q: How do livestock get this disease?
A: It is caused by a germ which lives in the soil.

Q: How is it spread?
A: Cattle often pick it up on over-fertilized pastures, or where plowing has brought spores to the surface.

Q: Can human beings get this disease, too?
A: Yes, anthrax can kill human beings as readily as animals. That is why extreme care should be taken in disposing of carcasses of animals that are anthrax victims.

Q: What should an owner do when anthrax is suspected?
A: The carcass should not be opened, but a veterinarian should be called at once to determine the cause of death and take steps to protect the rest of the herd if anthrax proves to be present.

Q: What preventive steps can be taken?
A: In anthrax areas, animals should be vaccinated regularly against the disease. Several types of vaccines give sound immunity if administered properly.

Farmer's Question Corner

PREPARED BY American Foundation For Animal Health

WHAT ABOUT BLOAT LOSSES?

Q: Which farm animals are most susceptible to bloat?
A: Cattle and sheep, especially when on early pasture.

Q: What causes bloat?
A: All forage and feed taken in by cattle or sheep goes through a process of fermentation in the rumen or stomach pouch with formation of various types of gas. Under certain conditions, as yet not fully understood, excessive amounts of gas become trapped in the pouch and cause bloat.

Q: What happens then?
A: The cow's rumen swells up like a balloon. These gases will make the cow very sick and a n d may even cause death if they are not released.

Q: How can bloat be prevented?
A: If pasturing legumes only, mixture of half grass and half legume. This combination will usually give the cow enough roughage to help prevent bloat.

Q: What other preventive measures are there?
A: If pasturing legumes only, farmers should feed their cattle hay before putting them on pasture. This roughage will help forestall bloat. Otherwise, animals should be kept on pasture until the legumes reach the bloom stage. There should also be a gradual change-over from barn feeding to pasture feeding. Keep free-choice salt and other minerals before animal at all times.

Q: If a cow bloats, what should the owner do?
A: If the animal is to be saved, a veterinarian should be called immediately. There are several emergency measures, but none are of value if too much time has elapsed.

Farm Bureau Activities

Anthrax warnings were sounded at all Farm Bureau meetings last week, as well as at a livestock meeting Thursday where Dr. Virgil Serogus, of Fort Worth, Texas, confirmed all the dangers involved in the dreaded disease.

Dr. Serogus urged the some 200 farmers who heard him not to take any chances with any dead animals, but to burn them without moving the carcass any further than necessary. If they had to be moved, place the carcass on some metal sled to drag them. The spores of anthrax must not be scattered if the present outbreak is held in check.

Anthrax attacks people the same as it does mules, horses, cattle, hogs, sheep or goats, Dr. Serogus stated. An outbreak of anthrax is within some fifty miles from Statesboro now, and two farms in the county are known to have bought dairy calves from the infected farm. This means, Dr. Serogus thinks, that Bulloch county is exposed to the dreaded disease and in danger of an outbreak for some three months.

Dr. Serogus would not attempt to tell the group Thursday how the disease could be identified, because of the numerous ways it works, but urged that any sick animals be examined by a veterinarian if the cause is not definitely known to the owner. Immunization materials and serums will be available as soon as they can be procured so that an outbreak can be curbed. The fact that anthrax is a spore disease causes the area on which an infected animal is found to be contaminated for years. Never handle a sick or dead animal without rubber gloves, Dr. Serogus urged.

R. L. Roberts urged the farmers to be on guard for anthrax in the Nevis community to turn out and vote on the tobacco control program, pointing out that a good vote will indicate to PMA officials the desires of the tobacco farmer.

Billy Cobb and Ed Purvis took up the same story on Thursday night at Register, and went so far as to say they did not know what the outcome might be if farmers turn down the control program on tobacco at a time when there is danger of losing lots of export trade for the thin type of flue cured tobacco grown here in this area. Mr. Cobb praised the work of the stabilization program on tobacco, and pointed out that this is one program that has actually made money and not lost any government money like some of the other programs.

Hines Smith, the Nevils president, stated to his group that the Farm Bureau always supported REA despite some of the present rumors otherwise. The Farm Bureau has recommended that the administrative expenses be curtailed, but never asked the money available to farmers for electricity and telephones be curtailed. Mr. Smith made plans to get an estimate on the corn yields of all the members of the Nevils chapter that entered the corn contest. He pointed out that these estimates had to be made this week so some of the members could turn hogs in their fields.

L. R. Anderson, the Register president, predicted that land will be available shortly to a proposed new industry for the community and that the proper officials will be so notified.

More Eloquent Than Words!

It is true, of course, that a Cadillac owner is proud of everything about his motor car. But it is also true that he reserves a special place in his heart for the beautiful crest that rides high on the hood.

For here, as only he can fully appreciate, is one of the most wonderful and unique symbols in all the world of manufactured products.

In fact, it seems safe to say that no other mark of identification speaks so clearly or so eloquently of the product that bears it... and of the man who owns it.

It tells, for instance, of magnificent engineering and inspired design—and of experienced craftsmanship and painstaking construction.

It promises mile after mile of superlative motoring enjoyment—and it foretells year after year of dependable and enduring performance.

It proclaims, in short, the Cadillac pledge of quality—that here is an automobile built to the highest standards it is practical to enforce in the production of a motor car.

And, oh, the wonderful things it says about the man behind the wheel!

It reveals, more surely than if the words were spoken, that he is a man of position and achievement in his own private world of affairs.

It attests to the high regard he places on the safety and the comfort of his fellow passengers.

And it says, with unmistakable clarity, that he is a person of discernment and good taste.

Little wonder that the man who owns a Cadillac takes special pride in the beautiful crest that identifies it and adorns it.

The Cadillac crest tells its most eloquent story when it adorns the magnificent car illustrated above. For here is the illustrious eight-passenger Cadillac "75"—so luxurious, spacious and distinguished that it stands alone among the world's motor cars.
